How to use brushes in Photoshop: - If you want to use a brush to paint or erase, first make sure your foreground is empty. In addition, disable the Fill tool (it must be turned off and paint/erase tools cannot paint/erase on a filled area). You can do this by clicking on the Window button (the button with the 3 dotted lines) and selecting the Brush Tool. - When you click the paint or erase button, a window appears that prompts you for the foreground color that you want to use. In the upper-right corner of this window is a color palette that allows you to pick the color you want to paint with. You can also make the Brush tool transparent (the button at the bottom-right corner of the window) so that you can see what color is behind it. - For the most part, you use brushes in the normal way. You make the brush move along the canvas and use the left and right arrows to control how the brush moves around. You can also use the middle mouse button to make the brush jump from one spot to another. For more instructions on using brushes, see the links below. - If you want to make a brush icon instead of using a normal brush, first make sure you have the Paint tool active. Then, click anywhere on the canvas and hold down the Alt key on your keyboard. This will activate the brush icon. To activate another brush icon or to make a new one, hold down the Shift key while you click again. - When using the Clone Stamp tool, first hold down the Alt key on your keyboard and click once. A window will appear with an icon of the one pixel the Clone Stamp replaces. Select the one pixel, and the Clone Stamp tool will paste it into the area that you are working on. - A FILL brush can be used to paint outside the edge of the canvas. You just have to hold down the Shift key while you draw your brush and paint. To see which pixel you are painting, click once. If you hold the Shift key, you only see the pixels inside the brush. - If you do not have a brush that you like, click on Filter > Brush > New Brush. You will be presented with a menu that allows you to select various shapes, textures, and colors. - If you would like to change the size of the brush, first click on Filter > Adjust Brush. You will be presented with options that
