"Tarnished" Gameplay: I don't really recommend playing this game if you're not into rpgs. I wish this kind of game was more popular on indie scene! It's not as story-heavy as "Observer". One can compare the following lines of Christa Wolf: "The times have changed: the desire and need for love has changed, today there is no longer a need to be alive in order to love. It's a different love. A love which asks nothing and which is in love with itself. A love which is alive only in the flesh, even though it is in the spirit, in essence, in psychic reality, even if it is sexless. It is a love which doesn't have a goal or aim; it is a love which doesn't demand anything of the other person, or of anybody else; it is a love which doesn't ask anything of the other person, but instead trusts in the other person, is not jealous, fears nothing. It is a love whose emotion is in the future and not in the past. Love has created bff6bb2d33
