Minecraft pc One of the most popular games. It is the most widely-played Q: VueJS: Access parent router-view from child I'm coming from Laravel and VueJS and I'm confused with how to easily access the parent router-view inside a vue component. Here's the basic setup. I have a list of properties. On click of a property I open a modal window to edit it. The property has its own route, the modal has its own route. I'm using VueJS's Router module, which has `transitionTo` available. Here's what I'm doing:

template: javascript: editProperty:
function(e) { e.preventDefault(); var
_id = this.id;
this.$router.transitionTo("modal-" + _id); }

The modal router-view works just fine. However, when the property is modified and I close the modal window and click on another property from the list, the parent router-view doesn't work. It doesn't find the property's id. So how do I get access to the parent router-view? A: The child component router is isolated from the parent one. The parent router-view doesn't know anything about your child router components In order to handle a transition between your components, you could use Vuex. Here is a simple example on how to use a filter to edit a user object A: You can use the same router for child and parent components like that: And after that you just pass the 'id' in to the child route like this: Example example VueRouter allows us

Our fallen prime had been overtaken by the forces of magic and darkness. The Temple was opened, giving rise to fear and chaos in the Capital City. A good portion of its population was replaced by the Undead and the land was divided into different areas through magic power to control and manipulate its people. Demons ruled, and people paid the price to use their magic to fulfill their quest. "We decided to do this" - I've recently released a soundtrack for "Dark Devotion" but it was a surprise after knowing the ending of the game - "where we decided to go our own way. When I first created the game, I always thought about having a soundtrack." The game will be officially released on the 31st of January. THE DARK DEVOTION SOUNDTRACK IS NOW AVAILABLE ON ITUNES: --- "What are you up to, T.J.?" she asked as he entered his room. He closed the door behind him and then

2007 Pier Pressure Review: Can Total Value Niche Protection Enhance Investment and Regional Economic Competitiveness? Pier Pressure was released on July 15, 2007 and provides a snapshot of today's most important economic, regulatory and competitive issues affecting U.S. and Canadian pleasure-boat owners. This report focuses on the latest regulatory proposals, including; new International Marine Organization (IMO) regulations relating to fuel efficiency and other changes to existing regulation; U.S. Coast Guard and National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) tightening; Canada Incorporating U.S. marine regulations, including the U.S. Coast Guard; a proposed Canadian regulation on radiant heat; new U.S. and Canadian boatyard regulation; and several new waterfront developments in Toronto, Canada and Green Bay, Greenville, IL. While this market snapshot presents many challenges and opportunities, pleasure boat owners should be aware of the current regulatory framework for the next few years. Even if no specific regulation is changed in the next few years, a changing regulatory framework could decrease the amount of time owners have to build a business. The U.S. Marine Recreational Industry (LRG) is excited to present our second edition of “Pier Pressure: Can Total Value Niche Protection Enhance Investment and Regional Economic Competitiveness?”. This report assesses the regulatory actions for pleasure boats that have been proposed by the International Marine Organization (IMO) over the past decade. First, the report provides a brief overview of IMO’s implementation of Regulation 79/2001 over the past 6 years. Major Changes for U.S. Boatyards and Americans by Jon Gresham The International Marine Organization (IMO) is the world’s foremost international organization that regulates ships of more than 300 tons and those used in inland waterways. IMO’s regulations aim to eliminate or minimize environmentally harmful discharges from shipping. At the July 2007 IMO Conference, IMO approved a number of long awaited regulations such as Regulation 9, a new definition of bunkering requirements, and a new definition of ship and its equipment termed as optional classes. This report identifies changes to the classification and the bunkering of pleasure craft, important fuel efficiency standards to ensure that these new regulations will result in lower operating costs for U.S.-based recreational boatyards. In conjunction with this release, LRG has published a new website which contains background information and information
