N-Acetyl L-cysteine protects against oxidative stress induced apoptotic DNA damage in osteoblastic cells by blocking the activity of p38 MAPK. The p38 mitogen activated protein kinase (MAPK) activation and consequent apoptotic DNA damage represent an important mechanism that regulates the osteoblast growth. It is postulated that the antioxidant effect of N-acetyl L-cysteine (NAC) could be important in the management of bone diseases. Herein, NAC was administered to mouse osteoblastic MC3T3-E1 cells in order to evaluate its potential role in alleviating oxidative stress-induced apoptotic DNA

The present version of the fully integrated software for circuit design in Altium Designer.The human epidermal growth factor receptor-2 (HER2) is one of four members of the erbB/HER receptor family, and is a member of the tyrosine kinase family that includes EGFR, ErbB3, and ErbB4. The family members are characterized by a ligand-binding domain (LBD) that is required for homo- and hetero-dimerization and is necessary for initiation of downstream signal transduction (Earp & Varmus, J. Cell. Biol. 93:477-489 (1982)). In contrast to the family members, for which ligands are already identified, no ligand for the erbB2 has yet been identified. The importance of erbB2 in carcinogenesis and progression of human tumors is best demonstrated by the fact that over-expression of the erbB2 gene in tumor cells leads to oncogenic transformation, cellular transformation and tumorigenicity (Levis et al., Proc. Natl. Acad. Sci., USA, 92:7462-7466 (1995); Kozu et al., Proc. Natl. Acad. Sci., USA, 90:3867-3871 (1993)). It has been demonstrated that the erbB2 gene is amplified and/or over-expressed in human breast and ovarian tumors and other carcinomas such as carcinomas of the head and neck, esophagus, stomach, pancreas, colon, rectum, endometrium and lung. The erbB2 protein and the overexpression of this protein is also correlated with a poor prognosis in breast cancer. Monoclonal antibodies against the erbB2 protein have been developed and used for clinical treatment of breast cancer (Kendall et al., Cancer, 73:1495-1502 (
