The views expressed by contributors are their own and not the views of The Hill. Michael Cohen In Michael Cohen's "explanation" for why he lied to Congress, he says that Donald Trump "used to hold me and my wife [who is one of the women whose claims he denied before the House Oversight Committee] at his clubs in NY, his family and the staff at Trump Tower at his request when we stayed there ... and that as a result, I felt it was necessary to rebut directly his lies and defend my family." In other words, he said, "Donald Trump asked me to lie about how often I've seen him and what he did." When and where did Trump ever request that you lie about anything? Please explain. Also, did you ever lie to the Trump Organization, to which you belong? "I did what he asked me to do." What does that mean? You're not a lawyer; you're a liar. If Trump "asked" you to lie, and you said to yourself: "I'll lie and take the consequences," that's not "doing what he asked." Michael Cohen - the Trump defender who lied to Congress Let's talk about serious crimes: You lied under oath to Congress about the negotiations of a Trump Organization building on the Moscow project, Trump Tower in Moscow. You and your lawyer lied to Congress about Trump's knowledge of that tower. You lied to Congress about Trump's knowledge of your trips to Prague to pay off women who say they had affairs with him. You and your lawyer lied to Congress about your consulting for the Trump organization in Russia. You lied to Congress about Trump's knowledge of those payments. You lied to Congress about being at the Trump Tower meeting about the Putin project. You lied to Congress about your speaking fees. You lied to Congress about not being aware of these things. You lied about being at Trump's side for 17 years, beginning when he made you his attorney. You lied about a number of his business deals. You lied about your $130,000 payments to Stormy Daniels. Trump praises Michael Cohen, claims the attorney is a "Gentleman" and is "very talented." He's a liar, not a gentleman, and he

Results of radioimmunotherapy in disseminated AIDS-related lymphoma. Among 201 patients with disseminated AIDS-related lymphoma treated in a prospective trial of intensive therapy between 1985 and 1996, 88 responded to a median of 5 (1-17) cycles of polychemotherapy. Seventy-two of these 88 patients then had autologous peripheral blood stem cell transplantation (APBSCT). Thirty-three of 70 evaluable patients treated only with APBSCT and 26 of 27 evaluable patients treated with radioimmunotherapy followed by APBSCT were alive after a median of 17 and 18 months, respectively, indicating that both approaches are effective in the treatment of AIDS-related lymphoma. Although responses and survival rates were lower in patients treated in the 'monotherapy' and 'radioimmunotherapy only' arms than in the 'chemotherapy only' arm, the overall survival rate was similar in all three arms, confirming that radioimmunotherapy can be substituted for a stem cell transplantation in the treatment of AIDS-related lymphoma. These results validate the use of radioimmunotherapy in the treatment of AIDS-related lymphoma. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to a broadcast data transmission method and apparatus, and more particularly to a broadcast data transmission method and apparatus for receiving an MPEG-2 transport stream from a broadcasting station, converting the MPEG-2 transport stream into discrete video and audio data, and performing predetermined data multiplexing and demultiplexing. 2. Description of the Related Art When digital broadcasting is introduced, it is considered that broadcast contents will be replaced with digital contents. Specifically, the broadcast contents may be stored in a recording medium or converted into digital data, and the digital data will be stored in a portable recording medium, etc. In this case, broadcast contents will be distributed using an MPEG-2 transport stream. Further, an MPEG-2 (Moving Pictures Experts Group) standard for transmitting and receiving the transport stream has also been developed, and therefore the system has been assumed to be based on the MPEG-2 standard. Further, since the MPEG-2 standard is standardized at a low bit rate, it can reduce the volume of digital contents as compared with other digital formats. In the application of an Internet protocol (IP)-based broadcasting system to broadcasting, generally, a broadcast station of digital contents stores desired program data in a recording medium, and it is played back for reproduction on a receiving side.
