A: This seems to be a problem with the way some elements of the page are floated. When you hover over any of the options it re-orders the elements around such that the "cancel" button is above the form; when you don't hover over any of the buttons it re-orders back to how the page is displayed above. This is because, for some reason, the form re-orders itself on hover in a way that's not consistent with the rest of the page. In order to get it to display as it should you need to give the form no float and then explicitly set it to float: right which will then let it display in what is effectively the correct position. This isn't really ideal of course, if I had my way you would just have to set a rule which would make sure it always stayed floated on the right. Q: Error while validating integer value in web3js: TransactionInitiate for contract fails I'm trying to create a simple contract and then add an event listener. The event should be triggered when value is transferred from a specified account. I'm using web3js version 1.0.0-beta.3 in my browser. My problem is that I get the following error message: "Error while validating integer value for payload field arg[3]. Expected to find function.transferWithAdress(_int32,address)" My code: contract.deployed=function(transactionHash, gasPrice, gasLimit) { console.log("Deploying event listener "+transactionHash); var foo; contract.setGeth = function() { var myWeb3 = new Web3(""); myWeb3.eth.getNetworkInformation().then(function(result) { console.log(result); console.log("My network: " + JSON.stringify(result)); console.log("Current account:"+web3.eth.getAccounts()); }); }; var hash = web3.eth.getTransactionCount(contract.address,gasPrice,gasLimit); console.log("Creating event listener "+hash); // Add event listener for transferWithAdress console.log("Add event
