EOBD-Facile torrent file will download instantly as long as you have the WLANImagine you have a batch of 100,000 objects. What would be the best way to store them in a database? To answer this question, you have to decide how big a machine you have, how many processors, how much memory, and the maximum physical data storage size. Once you have these answers, you can find out how much space the objects will take up, and you can decide how many of them will fit on your disk. For this simple example, I assume that the objects all fit on a single page of paper. To be able to track where the objects are in the database, I assume that they are numbered sequentially. The actual implementation might use the database table ID and something like a page number. Here's an example of the information that you might want to store: Object Number Object Size Page Number 1 1K 1 2 2 2K 2 3 3 4K 3 4 6K 4 5 8K 4 6 12K 4 7 16K 4 8 20K 4 9 24K 4 10 28K 4 11 32K 4 12 36K 4 13 40K 4 14 44
